

JOAN SHEPP
SPRING/ SUMMER 2015
VOL. I

Welcome to our home.

We've been here a while, in a discrete corner of Chestnut Street. Our windows, our eyes on the street are in a constant state of rebirth. We see a kaleidoscope of colors, forms, and textures.

Stop by.

A new you awaits...

Through the looking glass.

There's a new diversity of shapes, and textures.
Don't be afraid of new colors...or new forms. What is worth exploring now is the draped space between yourself and the clothes, how you move in them and how you live your life.

Chic Escape.

The author Kurt Vonnegut spoke of six seasons instead four. Aside from our familiar Winter, Spring, Summer, and Fall, he conjured up "Locking," from November to December and "Unlocking," from March to April.

These two additional seasons denote life shutting down, in retreat and submission, followed by a respective renewal.

Life is renewed in furtive lashes of bright sunlight, exposed ankles, toes, and rolled-up sleeves. We shake off the stiff mantle of a woolen winter and are content with the amber-lit sun from within our eyelids.

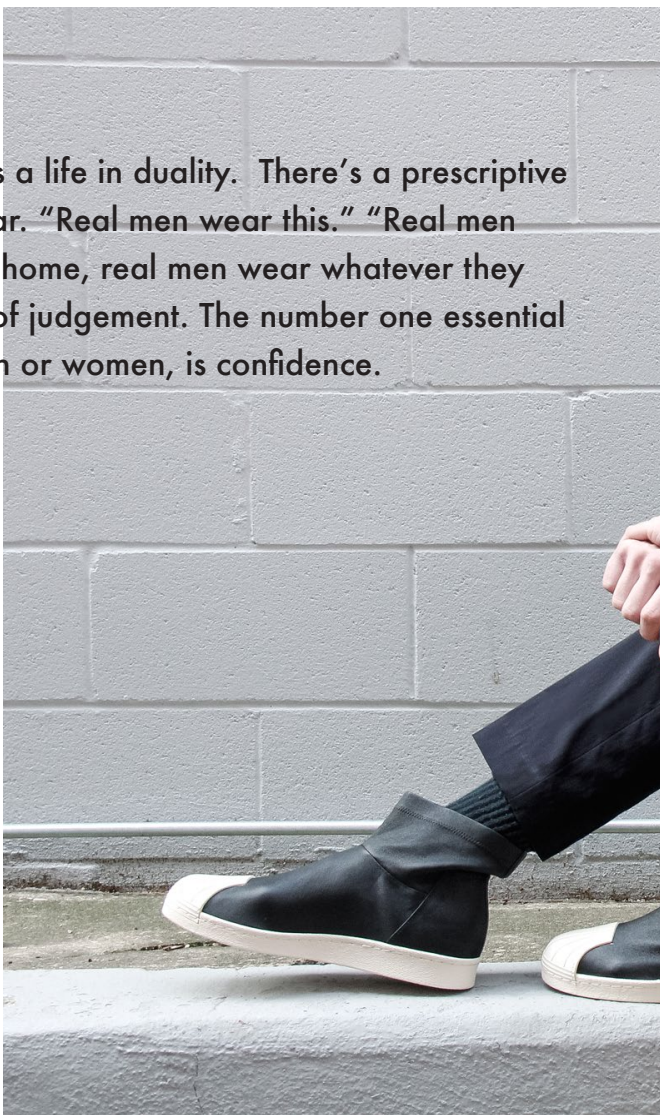

New Face.

6397 T-SHIRTS "we are the flowers in your head" tee, SACAI LUCK pleated skirt, MARNI color-block wedges

The 2015 man lives a life in duality. There's a prescriptive mantra in menswear. "Real men wear this." "Real men wear suits." In our home, real men wear whatever they want without fear of judgement. The number one essential this Spring, for men or women, is confidence.

Mercury isn't in retrograde anymore.

Cabin fever doesn't have the best of you.

It's time to feel a warm breeze softly on your skin.

Morning mimosas.

Bloody Mary's, brunch at 3 pm.

Sunglasses all day: indoors, out doors, no doors.

This Season is about you.

Make it your own.
